

Missouri's advantages for financial and professional services

“Missouri has long been a leader in the financial services sector, and three banks on Forbes’ list of the nation’s top banks are headquartered right here in the Show Me State. The financial and professional services community know that a trained and motivated workforce, outstanding connectivity, low taxes, and affordable energy costs make Missouri a very sound investment.”

—Governor Jay Nixon

5 reasons to locate a financial services company in Missouri:

1. Thriving industry: Missouri is an established leader in financial services. (page 3)

As the home to the headquarters for three of the top banks in the nation and two Federal Reserve Banks, Missouri earned the distinction of being Moneyrates.com's "best state for banking" in 2014.

2. Business-friendly: Missouri is more pro-business than other Midwestern states. (page 9)

Missouri is extremely tax-friendly—the state's franchise tax will be phased out by 2016, and it is ranked 7th-best state for property tax index and 4th for corporate income tax index in the nation. Property tax abatements are also available for qualifying companies.

3. Quality workforce: Missouri's got talent. (page 10)

Missouri has more than 10,000 licensed CPAs, more than 900 registered members of the CFA (Chartered Financial Analyst) Institute, and more than 230,000 workers employed in positions relevant to the financial services industry.

4. Central location: Missouri's central location and stable natural environment provide an ideal home for your customer's data. (page 14)

Located in the middle of the U.S., Missouri allows companies to stretch their work days to service customers on both coasts, and the state is within 600 miles of half the households in the country.

5. Solid infrastructure: Missouri has a dependable, redundant and diverse internet network infrastructure. (page 15)

Numerous Tier 1 providers have a strong presence throughout Missouri with over 2,000 miles of fiber combined. Future improvements to Missouri's connectivity include AT&T's Internet GigaPower service to be available in St. Louis and the new Google Fiber small business service in Kansas City.

REASON #2: Missouri is more pro-business than other Midwestern states.

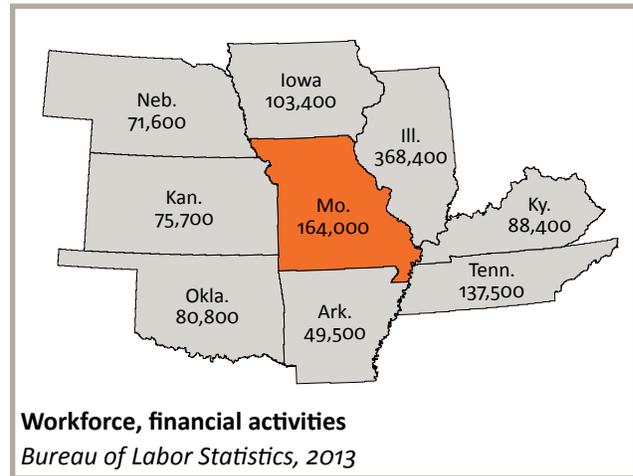

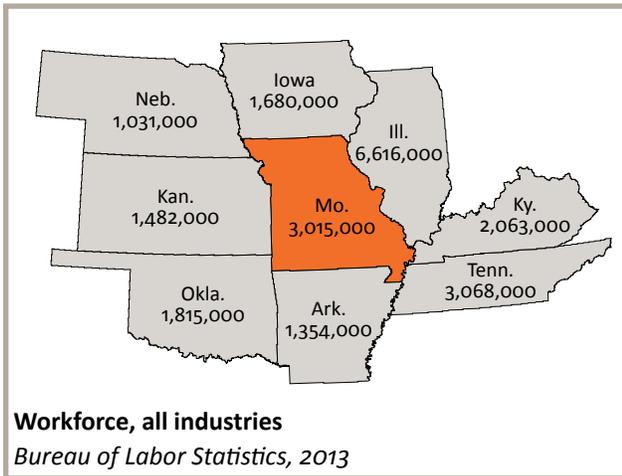

Business climate

- Missouri has remained in Pollina Corporate Real Estate's top 10 pro-business states for five consecutive years.
- Missouri is extremely tax-friendly. The state is 7th for property tax index and 4th for corporate income tax index in the U.S. (Tax Foundation, 2015). Property tax abatements are available for qualifying companies. Missouri's franchise tax will be phased out by 2016.
- Missouri is one of only nine states to receive the highest bond rating by all three rating agencies—Fitch Ratings, Standard & Poors, and Moody's Investor Service—in 2014. Its track record with S&P alone is even more distinctive, having earned the AAA rating for more than 50 years.
- Missouri's diverse economy makes it a far less volatile environment for business. The state has the 4th most diversified economy in the U.S. with a GDP of more than $276 billion (BEA, 2013) and exports totaling more than $12.9 billion (International Trade Administration).

Regulatory environment

- Missouri ranks in the Top 10 States for Regulatory Environment (Forbes, 2014).
- Missouri recently adopted a new elective single-sales factor apportionment methodology. This option states that a sale of tangible personal property is in Missouri if the purchaser's destination point is in Missouri. A sale of tangible personal property is not in Missouri if the purchaser's destination point is outside Missouri. Missouri is one of only a few states that allows taxpayers to choose their own income allocation formula (three-factor or single-factor), whichever results in the lesser corporate income tax liability.
- In 2007, Missouri enacted robust legislation to help businesses manage mainstream and non-traditional insurance risks. Companies benefit from a simplified initial application and redomestication review process, deductible licensing and renewal fees, and limits on actuarial review fees. In both 2009 and 2013, Missouri's captive insurance laws were enhanced to support the state's $6.5 billion captive insurance industry and further help lower the overhead costs for mid-sized businesses in the state.

REASON #3: Missouri's got talent.

Click on the orange text for more information.

- Forbes ranked St. Louis ranks 5th nationally in job gains in the financial services industry in 2014.
- According to the Wall Street Journal, employment in St. Louis's financial sector grew 84.7 percent between 2007-2012, more than any other major metro.
- More than 230,000, or 8.7 percent, of workers in Missouri are employed in core occupations relevant to the financial services industry.
- Missouri has more than 10,000 licensed CPAs. More than 900 Missourians are registered members of the CFA (Chartered Financial Analyst) Institute (Missouri Division of Professional Registration).
- Missouri had more than 2,100 graduates with bachelor's degrees or higher in Finance and Accounting in 2013.
- More than 40 Missouri colleges and universities offer bachelor's degrees or higher degrees in Finance or Accounting.
- A well-educated population provides an easily trainable labor pool. Missouri has a higher high school graduation rate (86 percent) than the national average of 81 percent (Education Week, 2014).
- Bloomberg Businessweek ranked Washington University's undergraduate business degree 5th in the nation in 2014. Washington University in St. Louis also has a part-time MBA program ranked 16th best by U.S. News and World Report in 2014.

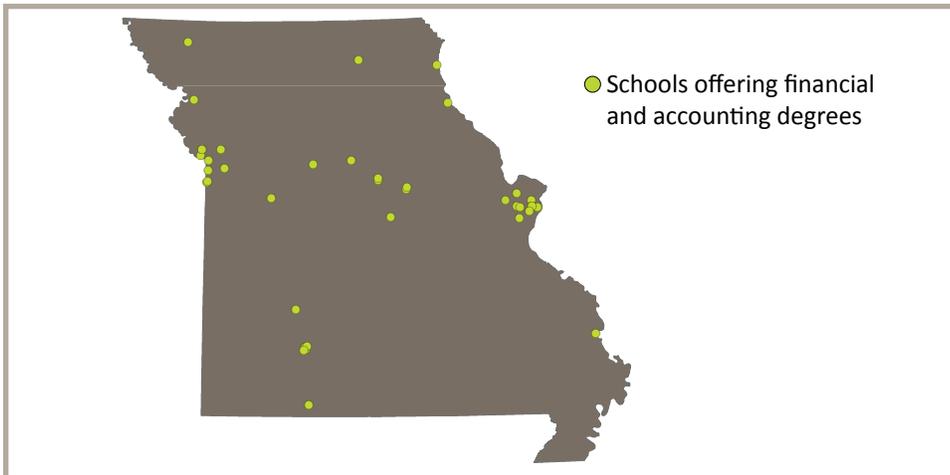

"Missouri's got the Midwest work ethic, which means we've got a terrific pool of people to draw from. We also have great schools: Washington University, Webster University, Saint Louis University and UMSL (the University of Missouri-St. Louis). We hire hundreds of graduates from those fine institutions. They're sharp, they've been challenged to think critically, and they've got excellent communications skills."

REASON #4: Missouri's central location and stable natural environment provide an ideal home for your customer's data.

Location

- Missouri's central location allows companies to stretch their work days to service customers on both coasts.
- Missouri is within 600 miles of 50 percent of U.S. households including those in seven of the nation's fastest growing metros: Atlanta, Austin, Dallas, Denver, Houston, Minneapolis, Nashville and San Antonio (Census Bureau, 2013).
- Missouri is bordered by eight states, tied with Tennessee for the most of any U.S. state.

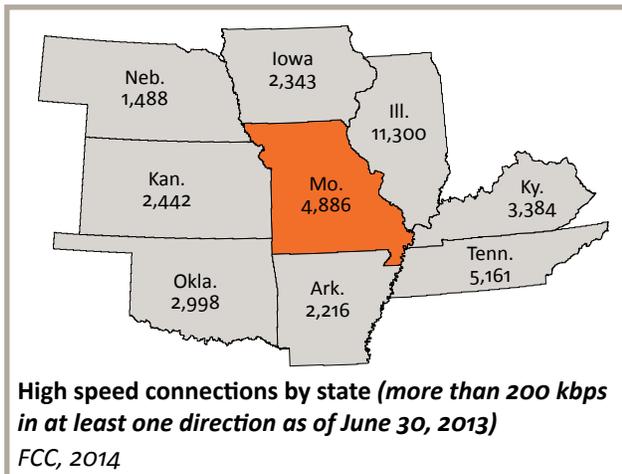

"The Kansas City region has a growing business hub and a thriving economy, so it's a great place for us to be. The Crossroad's district makes us more accessible to our current clients while providing the opportunity to reach out to new ones as well."

JOSH ROWLAND, VICE CHAIRMAN, LEAD BANK

Safe environment

- Located in the center of the country, Missouri is a low-risk state for acts of terrorism and has experienced no such events (FEMA).
- Missouri has a stable environment for keeping data secure. The state has experienced no major disasters related to hurricanes or earthquakes since record keeping began in 1957 (FEMA).

REASON #5: Missouri has a dependable, redundant and diverse internet network infrastructure.

- Numerous Tier 1 providers have a strong presence throughout Missouri, with over 2,000 miles of fiber combined. Providers include AT&T, CenturyLink, Cogent, Level 3, Sprint, Time Warner, Verizon and XO.
- In 2014, Google announced Kansas City would be the first to test the new Google Fiber small business service. Kansas City was selected from more than 1,100 other applicants in 2011 to be the first community to receive Google Fiber, an experimental broadband internet network infrastructure using fiber-optic communication.
- AT&T's Internet GigaPower service is available in Kansas City for qualifying residents and small businesses, and the company recently announced that the service would be available in St. Louis by the middle of 2015. The AT&T GigaPower network provides customers access to the fastest internet available from AT&T, featuring speeds up to one gigabit per second.
- Missouri benefits from the presence of the National LambdaRail (NLR) and Internet2, high-speed national networks connecting research institutions to one another for faster exchange of data. The National LambdaRail is a 12,000 mile, high-speed national network infrastructure that runs over fiber-optic lines. Internet2 is an advanced network consortium connecting more than 60,000 educational, research, government, and community institutions over their advanced fiber-optic network.
- Missouri has more high speed connections than most Midwestern states. High speed connections include fiber, ADSL, SDSL, Cable Modem, Satellite, and Fixed and Mobile Wireless.

Quality of life

- Missourians enjoy endless recreational and cultural options, including world-class fishing and hiking, national-ranked parks, and abundant music and theater options.
- With 1,000 miles of managed trails and more than 500 miles of national designated recreation trails, Missouri has been named the “Best Trails State” by American Trails (2013).
- Forest Park in St. Louis was named one of the World’s Most Beautiful City Parks by Travel + Leisure in 2013.
- Missouri consistently ranks among the states with the lowest cost of living in the U.S. and the lowest state and local property taxes per capita.
- Missouri is home to top ranked health institutions, such as Barnes Jewish Children’s Hospital (BJC) in St. Louis and A.T. Still University, the birthplace of osteopathic medicine.
- Missouri ranks among the top states in the U.S. for Blue Ribbon schools and consistently produces above average scores on college entrance exams.

“Because there’s a financial services base here, there’s labor for the kind of work we do. It’s a quality work force, motivated. And commute times are short. No one has to drive more than 30 minutes to or from work. In that way, Missouri is more oriented toward leading a balanced life.”
